

Life is too short not to live here.

The Tui'kn Partnership (made up of the five First Nation communities in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia) is nationally renowned for our commitment to team-based, state of the art primary health care delivery.

We will soon have positions available for family doctors who want the benefits of an innovative rural multi-disciplinary practice with the advantages of having a hospital close by.

Canada is watching us rewrite the history of Aboriginal health care. We welcome you to be part of our story.

Follow your dream, without compromise.

We know you could practice anywhere you want ...

It is a well known fact that all across Canada, there is enormous competition to recruit doctors. This is even truer for rural communities, where the need is often greatest.

Through the Tui'kn Partnership we are tremendously fortunate to have attracted a group of incredible family physicians over the last several years – probably because we have worked hard to evolve ahead of changes in the health care system. As we move into our new phase of development, we are inviting new doctors to join our growing team.

We know how important it is to provide a practice environment that is stimulating, supportive and staffed by people of the highest professional caliber and with a shared set of values. We've proven that we can attract new resources, pioneer new programs and demonstrate to the rest of the country what works.

Whether you're a young practitioner with an old soul or a seasoned physician who is looking for new life experiences, we need you.
